Cruiser Fleet In Port

GREAT CROWD GREET'S SWINBURNE'S SHIPS

As bright and clean as new pins the vessels of another great American Fleet from another great ocean, the magnificent guardian of our West Coast, only less an object of the world's gaze than that Armada of the Eastern Coast which this city welcomed two months ago, have rounded Diamond Head, and brought their thousands of men as guests of Honolulu.

Only less important than the great world-trip of the Atlantic Battle Fleet is this cruise of the Pacific Squadron, under Admiral Swinburne, which shall include Samoa as well as Hawaii, a demonstration to the world of the fitness and strength of the American Navy. The guests which Honolulu has been preparing for weeks past to welcome, today arrive. The excitement of "Fleet Day," when Admiral Sperry's great Fleet hove in sight, is duplicated.

Swinging around Diamond Head shortly before noon in loose formation, seven big cruisers, long, white, beautiful hulls, and seven little destroyers, with their one attendant, the Pacific Fleet presented a spectacle worth seeing.

They were sighted off Koko Head at 10 o'clock.

The vessels comprising this fine squadron are the West Virginia, flagship, an armored cruiser; and the armored cruisers Maryland, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, California, Washington, and South Dakota. Besides these there are the destroyers Truxton, Hull, Whipple, Hopkins, Perry, Peble, and Stewart, and the attendant vessel Solace.

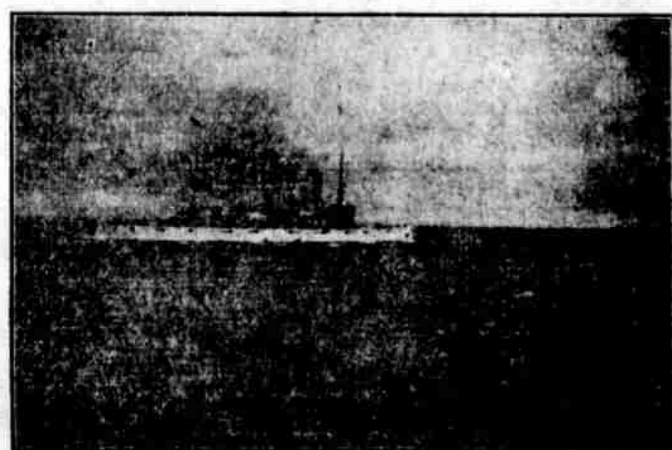

Everything was found ready to meet them as they steamed at a leisurely rate down the channel, led by the West Virginia.

Fleet Is Sighted
Being sighted off Koko Head a few minutes before 10 o'clock, the vessels came slowly down the channel in loose formation, the West Virginia leading. At about 11 o'clock, when it was thought that the doctor would have to go out as in the case of a merchant vessel, to pass this fleet, a wireless was received, stating that there were no contagious diseases on board any of the squadron. So the pilots went out at once, without waiting for any more.

Toys Cast Off
As they rounded Diamond Head all of the fifteen vessels were steaming under their own power. At 6 o'clock this morning when something like smooth water had been reached, the low-lines of the destroyers were cast off, and for the first time during the trip these little craft came forward under the impulse of their own power, and going to port as they got

GRAND JURY IN SESSION

Is Investigating Case Of Lawyer Leon
Strauss

The Territorial Grand Jury was in session this morning, and took up a number of important cases. George Angus is the new foreman of the Grand Jury. Witnesses for two important cases were on hand this morning, but they were not called, as the inquisitorial body had its attention taken the most of the morning by Japanese cases. Attorney Leon Strauss will receive his share of attention before the Grand Jury, as will also Keleikini, the man who murdered his wife a short time ago out at Kalihi. Bernard Keleikoto and Miss Mabel Puaol were witnesses in attendance.

nearly to the harbor entrance, and standing out from the shore before casting anchor.

The First Division, led by the West Virginia, came directly on into the harbor. The West Virginia went to the Ewa side of the Alakea wharf and there tied up. Berger's band was out to meet them, on the Naval wharf, and a huge crowd had collected all along the city front.

Crowd Held Back
A detachment of marines under Lieutenant Fay cleared this wharf of people.

In fact, greater strictness than before was shown. As the West Virginia came up the harbor, thirteen guns were fired from the Naval Station, and answered by six guns from the flagship.

Captain Corwin P. Rees, commandant at the Naval Station, and Lieutenant Commander Moses, captain of the yard, went onto the wharf as soon as she came alongside, and paid their official calls on Admiral Swinburne. Mrs. Swinburne then went aboard.

Maryland's Pennant

The Maryland, which tied up at the other side of the Alakea wharf, carried at the peak of her foremast the "gunnery pennant" for vessels of the first class, a trophy for the greatest all-around efficiency in handling the ship's guns of any vessel of the first class in the United States Navy.

BIG FOUR WERE HERE SEPT. 2, 1907

It is an interesting coincidence that the cruisers known as the "Big Four," and consisting of the West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Colorado, came in to port a year ago today. The cruiser fleet was then in command of Rear Admiral Dayton, and came to port from Yokohama, at which port it had stopped after receiving sailing orders from Chefoo. There were about 4000 men in the fleet and the ships remained in port about two weeks, during which time elaborate entertainments were given by the officers and the men.

Queen Celebrates Her 70th Birthday

FORMER QUEEN LILIUOKALANI

From a Photograph Taken When Hawaii Was an Independent Monarchy

"I am thankful to our Heavenly Father because I have been spared to live and celebrate my seventieth birthday today."

Her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani this forenoon made the above statement as she received the callers who paid their respects. She looked well and was apparently as vigorous as ever. She was assisted in receiving

Officers Of Commercial Club

The Board of Governors of the Commercial Club of Honolulu held their meeting this noon for the election of officers. A. G. M. Robertson, who has served the club as vice president for two years, declined a nomination for president, and the retirement of Mr. Trent from the Board of Governors by the expiration of his term left a vacancy in that office to be filled by a new member. The election resulted as follows: President--F. M. Wakefield; Vice President, Edwin H. Paris; Secretary, J. L. McLean; Treasurer, Fred B. Damon.

Governor Frear has received the last notice of the Trans-Pacific Commercial Congress, to be called to order in San Francisco on October 6th and to last until October 10. This Congress is second in importance only to the National Congress. The subjects for discussion by the delegates to this congress are many, and they all pertain to the up-building of the west. Hawaii is directly interested, inasmuch as a great part of the time of the convention this year will be given over to the islands. No political questions will be taken up.
